

Sharmin Kaniz

Greed, 2012

Acrylic, oil pastel, varnish and gouache

28 x 21 cms

I have been painting from a very early age. Creating something has always been one of my passions. For me, like everything else, painting has its own language. I simply use various tools to tell stories. In my work there are no accidents, everything has its own little reason to be where it is. The more you look, the more you might notice things in my work. I paint how I feel and what I feel, I try my best to be honest in it.

Each piece has its own story no matter how simple or detailed it may be. Inspiration comes to me in various forms and from many different artists but I always try my best to express myself in my style and in 'my way'. I truly believe that originality is one of the most important skills of all, because it's what makes us who we are. Each of us is beautiful in our own ways and we should be proud of it!

<https://mymadness.see.me/>